Abstract:

For Balinese Hinduism society, tracking the family genealogy has an important role not only in the religious life, but also in their social-cultural-political life. Kawitan (has meaning: the origin ancestry line of a family) in Bali, act as a foundation of Balinese’s social life based on concept of Atma Tattwa and Purnabhawa, believe in reincarnation. People tracking the family genealogy to stabilize the identity which has meaning to strengthen their humanism existence, to see the dynamic meaning within and family or historical development of Bali. This is unique because there will be a lot of aspects that influence in study about Kawitan: historical, biological, religious aspects, and even psychological and political aspects that can potentially started custom conflict that arise agitation and violence. It can happened because of lack information taken. All this time, information tracking about the family genealogy in society only based on nuncupative knowledge and historical record on lontar (palm-leaf manuscripts) which are not integrated. Within the technology advancement, genealogy tracking should be easier, but it rising a dilemma in society, most of them refuse to use technology and choose to use traditional ways. Based on qualitative research, using in depth interview method and participative observation, further will be researched comprehensively about the Kawitan genealogy tracking, backgrounds of Kawitan tracking in Balinese Hinduism society studied from ontology, epistemology, and axiology aspects, regulation and management effort, as well as future planning related to the Kawitan tracking development program which are more inclusive, synergistic and integrative.

Introduction

Genealogical information searching activity for the Balinese Hindu society has an important role, not only concerning about genetic inheritance, but also include socio-religious aspects, culture, and political position. The concept of Hindu teaching is so embedded in all aspects of life and social activities of Balinese culture, and people often find difficulties to separate where religion and where traditions, both have an inseparable relationship. Similarly with Kawitan tradition, the concept of the Hindu teachings provide soul for Kawitan tradition. Hindu teachings on Atma Tattwa and Punarbhawa, giving a sort of confirmation of the existence of Kawitan in Balinese life.

Besides the religious aspect, studies on Kawitan also provides a wide range of viewing angles that can be used. This is unique because there will be many aspects that affect each other in a study about Kawitan: besides the aspect of religious, historical aspects, biological aspects, there are also social aspects, cultural, even psychological aspects and politics that can lead to customary conflicts until the upheaval in society. One of them is related to use of the title among the people of Bali. The use of a certain title on the one hand can generate pride or satisfaction for the wearer, but on the other hand give rise to a variety of harsh reaction by the other party (Krepun, 2004). Many people around will scoffs if any members of the society who changed the title, which is often higher than the previous position. So that the person who changed their title, bear all the consequences personally, not infrequently they would be ostracized from society or kasepekang.

Kawitan tradition with all its positive and negative sides, will not be abandoned by society, however people still have an interest on it. In the tradition of Kawitan, there are activities such as search and documenting genealogy, both of which are an unity and inseparable. Often then, the problems related to Kawitan arise due to the lack of information available. During this time, genealogical information search activity in Balinese society is based on nuncupative knowledge and recorded history on the lontar (palm-leaf manuscript). This paper provide a detailed overview about Kawitan culture, focusing on the history, the background of the Kawitan searches, search activity using traditional ways and possible changes in the direction of electronic form.

About Kawitan

The word of Kawitan in Balinese perspective etymologically derived from the root ‘wit’ means origin or progenitors (Warna, 1978; Nordholt, 1996). Balinese commonly profess patrilineage, family relationship of which line comes from the father (male) side. However, lately, the more-modern family in Bali has appreciated the humanistic values, viewing both patrilineage and matrilineage as the same point. Even though, some aspects are based on this patrilineage such as family heirloom and wealth inheritance.

To be tracked backwards, it was when Balinese had left the nomadic era and started the folk culture phase, then started to create settlement, by settling down at areas nearby rivers.1

1 Proven by a lot of archeological findings found in some places nearby rivers in Bali, such as around Pakerisan and Petanu, which were the center of the government of ancient Bali Kingdom at the time, under The King of Udayana and his queen, Mahendradatta (interview with I Wayan Geria, April 2016). So about Puri (court) of which the existence found in places nearby Badung River, Puri Jro Kuta is at the western of the river, Puri Satria is at the eastern, Puri Pemecutan and Puri Alangkadjang are at the southern of Badung river. (interview with Nyoman Wijaya, April 2016)
Family groups lived in an area, grouped themselves creating neighbourhood, cooperating to overcome nature and enemy disruptions. This is where the Kawitan had begun. The social live started with social interaction such as dead ceremony, religion ceremony, etc. It emerged sekaa patus (social donation group) that became the embryo of Banjar organization in Bali (interview with Nyoman Wijaya, April 2016).

As the number of the family member increased, they built a Pura (temple) named Paibon or Pura Panti, a temple of the bigger family unit relationship in which strain can still be tracked. Moreover, a group of paibon in a large number known as Kawitan. Here the family consanguinity is difficult to be tracked because the number of the member is too large. Lately, there will be a banjar that consists of groups of family from different kawitan. The assemblage of banjar formed a desa adat that is lead by a chief, which comes from Bendesa family, Pasek family, Pande family, etc, and then it was completed with the coming of Aryan from Java who created new kawitan (interview with Nyoman Wijaya, April 2016).

Kawitan does not always mean the position of generation or genetics inheritance biologically, either kinship. It describes existence and status, also marks the people status and profession in the court era. In addition, after the colonialism of Netherland, this caste system had been transformed from the consep of Catur Wangsa into a strict hierarchial caste, in order to succeed the sweatshop they had regulated. Besides, kawitan also functions as information, both internally and externally. Internally means building understanding in family about identity and existence. Externally it informs the social class in the social live.

Communication pattern in the society is affected by knowledge of which Kawitan a person come from. Bali language then becomes a finely graded, hierarchical language which offers endless possibilities for conveying and withholding respect (Howe, 1995). Appear the term antuk linggih that usually used to ask an addresse’s social level or which social group he is coming from. It will affect the language they use to conversate each other, and it is called anggah angguhing basa (regarding high and low in language politeness level). A person who comes from a group of lower family shall speak politely and carefully; and contextually positions himself at a lower level to the a person who considered has higher position. However, the usage of anggah-ungguhing basa Balinese language that initially refers to caste configuration, lately grows become an egalitarian language (Krepun, 2004:124). Nowadays, in the modern and globalization era, the usage of anggah-ungguhing basa is no longer limited to the caste of family, it slowly shifts for example by the difference position of work life such as between supervisor and staff, between teacher and student. In a modern society, it no longer becomes a big deal.

Background of Kawitan Searches

In Hindu Balinese religious belief system, there is an understanding or a concept called Panca Sradha. People of Hindu underlie their belief into five things or Panca Sradha itself, such as Brahman—Widhi Tattwa which is believing and convinced toward the existence of the God, Atman—Atma Tattwa which is a belief toward the existence of Atma (spirit) which is ensoul every lives, Karmaphala believes toward the existence of karma law (law of cause and effect or the result of deed), Purnarbhawa or the belief toward reincarnation, and Moksa or belief toward the unity between Atman and Brahman.

Panca Sradha, with all its five aspects; Brahman, Atman, Karmaphala, Punarbhawa, dan Moksa, didasari oleh Sradha (belief) which is come from Veda that broadly explained later on in various Upanisad as follows (in brief); Sang Hyang Widhi (God) is also mentioned as Brahman which was affected by Maya and then turn into Atma (spirit) which ensoul every human, animal, plant. Specifically for human view, based on the Karmaphala law, every thought, saying, and deed are the criterion of value for the holiness of Atman that determine wether Atman can be united again with Brahman or not. If both were united, it is called Moksa, but in reverse, it is called Punarbhawa.

On the other hand, the Hindus also recognize the concept of Tri Rna or three debts or duties possessed by people in life, including Dewa Rna (debt to God for life), Pitra Rna (debt to the ancestors for their services) and Rsi Rna (debt to teachers on science and wisdom). If it is linked by the concept of teaching of Panca Sradha described previously, we take only one part, that is Punarbhawa. It is defined as birth repeated, belief in reincarnation, the spirit of ancestors who have died can be reborn into the world. So the consequence that respect for ancestors can also be achieved or reflected through respect for human (descendants). Because in man is believed the spirits of deceased ancestors were reside (reborn). Comes the holy sacrifice to the ancestors who are in the human body through Yadnya ceremony, as a form of remuneration for the abundance of the gifts that have been given.

The Balinese are basically afraid to cut off its relationship with the ancestors, considering the actualization of the concept of 'rights and obligations' in the concept of Tri Rna. Hindus obligation to provide a form of devotion to the ancestors on present life. Therefore, that is why the Balinese Hindu community who do not know who were their ancestors, certainly will try to search for information on the origins of their Kawitan. In the socio-religious condition, community wants to unite feeling with his ancestors, establish connectivity between the current life with previous life. People needs to devote their ancestors through prayer, therefore Hindus build a place to worship them which is known as Merajan at the level of each house, in addition to worship the glory of God, Hindus also venerate their ancestors. Ancestor worship is described as a connecting thread between man and God. According to excerpts of the text in Kakawin Ramayana “wrūh sira ring Wēda, bhakti ring Déwa, tar malupeng pitra puja” which means 'He who is adept at studying the Vedas and devoted to the gods, does not forget to devote to his ancestors'. In Bali Hindu cosmology, ancestor is described as a connecting ladder between man and God, with parents who are in the first level. Hindus believe that God in the concrete manifestation is the parents (father and mother), so if we delight both parents, is equal to we please God.

3 Yadnya in the Hindu belief understood as a holy sacrifice, a form of offerings to create a state of balance. Something that was presented by the people as a form of obligation, because people feel that they have the right. So it can be said to be a form of "fringe benefits" or "pay the debt", to complete their life in order to create a balance.
From the figures above, we can see the level of kinship Balinese, I (ego) is the central point with vertical and horizontal connection. Can be seen the difference term in three layers to the top and three down, but on the fourth layer, and so on (kumpi; buyut; kelab) the term used is the same. This means that, Balinese only able to remember the three levels of layers up and down vertically, otherwise they do not know who the great-grandparents (buyut), or even their kelab and kelambiung, considering the average age of human life. In the understanding of the Balinese, vertical kinship is more strict and continual, it is based on the influence concept Punarbhawa and Pitra Rna earlier, while the horizontal relationship seems more loose and often considered less important.

Because of the limited ability of the Balinese to remember and recognize their ancestors, it is often that the information about their Kawitan is incomplete. Therefore, it then encourages Balinese to search their kawitan, to fill the information gap, so that it can be reconnected. There are several reasons why many of the Balinese in present are losing track of their ancestors, and this is because the nature of Balinese people who do not like documenting or recording his family tree. In addition, in the kingdom era, frequent social and political conflicts that led to many of the knights who hides their identity and became a commoner, or known as Nyineb Wangsa or Mapatiha Wangsa, this is done to escape, because the occurrence of war, a king who lost the battle with the whole army will be the spoils of war, to avoid that, the knights fled and did Nyineb Wangsa. Patita Wangsa was not only done by those who do not want to become the spoils of war, but also for the nobility who disobedient towards the rules. In today's modern life, there is also wangsa's ksatria (knight) who takes his title off, as happened to Gusti family who came from Menanga area (Karangasem), when he were asked about the reason to remove his title, the answer is quite simple, he says that he is not in a family which is capable financially, and with being the same as most people, it will be easier for them to accept help from anyone. (Interview with Wayan Westa, April 2016)

From the perspective of history of Balinese civilization, there are a variety of reasons behind the activities of searching genealogy information in accordance with the current culture at the moment. History of Bali itself develops in five stages, (1) Kebudayaan rakyat (folk culture) live in agrarian society, cultivating land, from BC until the tenth century, the longest phase; (2) Kebudayaan keraton (Court culture) begins with Warmadewa - Udayana era about the eleventh century, centre of government was around Tukad Pakerisan Pejeng, the beginning of Desa Pakraman, banjar and subak. Around fifteenth century, entering Waturenggong government, marked with the emergence of the ninth kingdom or Puri in Bali; (3) Colonial culture, in 1849 the Dutch colonial government entering Bali via Buleleng, then followed by the Japanese colonial government for three and a half years; (4) National culture, after the declaration of independence of the Republic of Indonesia in 1945; (5) Modern culture, the presence of Bali at this moment in the movement of modernity.

According to Nyoman Wijaya, the observing activity for Kawitan conducted by the first King of Mengwi, I Gusti Made Agung Bima Sakti, with his son, I Gusti Agung Panji did an expedition to Java to get information about their real ancestor. Since now the society, especially the nobleman, trace their ancestor. This activity getting more active during the kolonial period. The Dutch colonial government make a policy of physical construction which is needing many power of laborer and gaffer. There were three board categories of slaves: prisoners of war, debt slaves, and convicts (Nordholt, 1996: 41).

Therefore, when it enters the colonial period, the Balinese trace their family trees to avoid themselves from the forced labor, so they do not get the grunt work (memata-mematu). At that time the Dutch colonial government did retraditionalisation toward Catur Wangsa concept which is existing in the kingdom as the caste system very strictly, to be used as a guideline in the system of forced labor (Wijaya, 2009). The colonial government reassert boundaries or strata of the caste in Bali. The common resident Neither nobles nor were part of the entourage, they were reffered to as Jaba or outsiders (Nordholt, 1996). Those who identify themselves as Jaba, in the caste system by the colonial government then classified as Sudrawangsa, while Brahmana, Ksatria and Wesya classified as Triwangsa. The Dutch colonial government is very familiar with the social life of the Balinese when the days of empire, where the people are very trusting and devoted to his king. For ease of control, the colonial government made approaches to the kings, by giving privileges to the nobility of it. So with the grouping and differences in workload, it has resulted the emergence of resistance by certain groups in society, especially by those who feel aggrieved by the rules, embodied by reconstructing their identities.

4 It is prohibited when Triwangsa recourse to the Sudrawangsa. It was mentioned in lontar Widhi Pepincatan, containing the prohibition for Triwangsa to live in Sudrawangsa's house, given the same food and drink with Sudrawangsa, as well as other restrictions.

During the colonial rule, the Triwangsa freed from forced labor, while the Sudra required to do so. People of Wesya only assigned to carry official papers. While Brahmana and Ksatria released completely from the forced labor (Krepun, 2004). The colonial government really privileging the Triwangsa. So then many members of the nobility and prebali which was formerly in the pre-colonial system holds a royalty for granting the King because his services, should suddenly fall into Sudra in the new caste created by the colonial government which came into force since 1910. Therefore, a lot of rejection appeared, including the movement of Pande from Beng in 1911 who protested that they are not pleased when grouped as Sudras, they refused to perform forced labor and demanded their religious social rights (interview with Nyoman Wijaya, April 2016).

Those people who used to be a noble and prebali before the colonial period, are trying and struggling to regain the title and position as a noble by submitting an application to the Raad Kerta (customary courts) to be established as the nobility again. Therefore, since 1910 Raad Kerta in Bali accepting many applications by the term 'perkara title' (title case), the lucky ones will get the title of nobility and freed from labor. People who then holds nobles because the result of Raad Kerta, then be a scorn by the public, therefore there is a well known term like ‘Gusti pones’, because of the degree obtained by the verdict (pones = judgment) Raad Kerta. Those who wish to restore their caste through Raad Kerta, conducted by paying a sum of money, other than that they should be able to prove that they were indeed a true noble which is formerly was Mapatita Wangsa, by observing their Kawitan and get a recognition from their relatives. But there are also many Sudra who deceive the process in order to get noble title, by means paying an acquaintance who came from the Gusti to be a witness, evidenced by eating food in a plate together, as proof that they are one blood. Because as we all know, it is not justified for the Triwangsa eat the same food as Sudrawangsa. Therefore, there are more and more people who apply for it to obtain a degree of nobles, to avoid forced labor. So until 1929, finally the Dutch colonial government prohibits the submission for a peerage through Raad Kerta verdict. Based on this, we can see that the trend in searching Kawitan happened in the colonial period is to seek equal rights, among Triwangsa and Sudrawangsa, in order to avoid forced labor demands of the colonial government.

Recently when entering the national culture era, the development tendency of Balinese who hunt for the noble title up to the palace in Java, which is not only done by people who never hold the title before, but also by those who have traditionally holds a higher level. Holding the title of nobility is regarded as something more prestigious, in the end the title was also aimed to gain position or high political position. Holding nobility title as a direct descendant of King Majapahit for example, would give pride to the wearer, but not with others who may be argued with it or even look at it cynically.

But in the Balinese life that are more modern nowadays, most people have not focused too much on activities competing for the title of the highest for a specific reason. The leader of warga Pasek, Pande, nowadays have a clear agenda for a change. From their socio demographic characteristic we see that these leaders are mostly members of new elites that gained their social economic status trough modern and not through status ascription by birth (Pitana, 1999). They no longer seek or expect to hold the title of Ida, Dewa or Gusti, but rather focused on attempts to develop themselves through scientific quality by winning titles in the fields of science, such as Dr. Ir., or Prof., they have recognize that is the mind and intelligence that is capable of elevating his own people, not because holding the titles of nobility.
Then in the end, the main goal for someone who searching for their Kawitan is to search for their identity, to know the origins of where they actually came from (witi). They are trying to establish a connection with a previous ancestral life, according to belief of Balinese Hindu community to their ancestors or Dewa Pitara. Balinese Hindu community, indeed, tend to avoid errors arising due to forgotten ancestors, or in terms of Bali known as plagues, forgetting their identity. Because it is often, people who have bad luck tend to be stated 'forgetting their Kawitan', such as businesses or jobs that always fails, chronic pain that can not be cured, struck down by disaster, and so on. But not infrequently, many Balinese who feel their life is getting better or even become successful after finding their Kawitan. There are many examples of Balinese who became successful after finding their Kawitan, such as chairman of the Santrian Group and the Prada Group. The Balinese society certainly hope to always get a better life, by building a harmony—Tri Hita Karana, a harmonious relationship between the three elements of life: man, God, and the nature.

_Lontar to Electronic Form_

In the process of their kawitan tracking, Balinese oriented to the notes of family tree that was written on lontar. A Lontar (palm-leaf manuscript) that contains information about family tree is called Babad. It documented notes and important events that had been done by the ancestors and also contains sermons to be always doing good and to not doing something endanger others. Moreover, babad also contains myths; such as ability of communicating to Goddess, a belief as the descendant of Goddess, a story of marrying angels, given birth from a stone, etc. Those are the characteristics of Babad. The weakness of babad is, it was often inserted with political elements so the actual family tree becomes disorder. Sometimes what was written are not in accordance with fact because the actual story had been written back and forth. This is backgrounded by the society which was keen on showing their life experience off, and because they overstated the story in babad.

Practically, besides using lontar as references, people also consulting with babad expert that mastering knowledge about history of Bali entirely, especially those regarding Balinese lineage. The lineage investigation was done by using territory or resident approach besides tracking the ancestor’s profession function and tasks in the past. Therefore, it could be matched with the kawitan that having similarity of history, territory, or profession. Basicless, the investigation of kawitan is related with feeling and family beliefs. That is why the process of investigation usually takes a long time. Sometimes there is kawitan alteration because a person does not feel in to his previous kawitan.

The practice of kawitan investigation by using traditional ways is often involving balian (shaman) in order to collect the information. Balinese calls this activity as meluasin (trance channeling). They believe that balian is the so-called jan bangun, described as stairs that connect human world and the world of the ancestor’s soul. Via this mediation, Balinese are able to communicate with their ancestors, questioning how the past was, in order to find out more information supporting those that were written in literatures. The information tracking is a long process and involving trial-and-error within. Therefore a big family meeting needs to be held to decide which kawitan to be followed. As stated before, this investigation involving feeling and somebody’s belief.
The main problem of Balinese difficulty in finding their kawitan is because of lack of documentation. Not to be blamed, most of Balinese social live were backgrounded as agrarian. The activity of documentation in lontar was only held inside the palace, and the documentation was in the form of prasasti. Prasasti is an authentic evidence that confirm the authority and position of the King and his royal family. Another reason Balinese did not documented their family tree was because their limited access in language and alphabet to lontar. The language that is used in lontar is Kawi, which was mastered only by limited people.

It continues to today, only small number of the Balinese are able to write on a lontar, moreover to read and understand the content because of the language problem. Therefore, the proces of Kawitan investigation really depends on the ability of a Babad master. Viewing the problem, the family tree documentation nowadays is no longer focusing on lontar. Many urban and semiurban family in Bali are no longer documenting their family tree on a lontar, but is written on paper, being framed, even considered to be a family hairloom (interview with Wayan Geria). The biggest revolution in writing media in Bali was started with the introduction of paper and typing machine, about in 1950-s, and after that the usage of lontar be slowly replaced by paper. The rapid development of technology not only affects the usage of lontar to paper, the digital technology also brings effects to Balinese attitude in fulfilling their needs of information, including about kawitan. Today information about kawitan is easily found in internet. Even a massive project is on going to digitalize the lontar script so that the results can be accessible by anyone via archive.org. It includes the large amount of lontar babad which lately can be online read or downloaded to be offline read later.

A state of worry then emerged, questioning whether the traditional values will be replaced by the technology. As shown in figure 2 above, in the development of socio-cultural live of Balinese, there is a dialog between tradition and modernity, and there is a compromise within. Information technology appears with double-sides, one side is the positive and the other is the negative. This is what is called the technology pathology in cultural development. Whenever the positive side dominantly appears in the development of information technology, there will be a synergy. It means the tradition is supported or strengthen by the technology. The tradition will still be existing in the society and it is what we call harmony. However, if modernity in the form of technology brings more negative impacts, it will bring a state of worry. The technology might weaken or destroy even kill the existing tradition in the society, and emerging the so-called antithesis.
In the process of kawitan investigation, antithesis might not appear yet. It is because Balinese track the information about family tree via spoken information and historical documentation in the form of lontar by the help of a babad master. Even though the information can also be searched in the internet, but it does not provide all they need. Ideally, technology supports the investigation process of kawitan and emerges a synergy between tradition and the modernity itself. However, it comes to a dilemma in the society. Most people prefer using traditional ways than technology.

Balinese can not fully depend on internet investigation, because it is impossible to find their kawitan just by searching the internet. It has limited information and has no detail. It will only be a supporting information and thus the traditional ways are still priority. Besides, the kawitan investigation process contains traditional values that are irreplaceable by electronic form. Balinese who does the family tree investigation feels more comfortable and trust to consult with the babad mater directly, or by communicating via media with his ancestors through meluasin activity. Meluasin is some kind of test, to check whether the collected information via literature and spoken are matched each other. It needs to be remembered, finding the kawitan is strongly related with personal feel and belief, because its investigation aims to build a fixed identity that means fixing the existence of Balinese humanity.

Future planning

The main problems encountered in the Kawitan searches is a tradition to write the genealogy becoming increasingly scarce, which is the main cause why the Balinese difficult to find their Kawitan. If anything, the Balinese people rarely write down his family tree with complete and continuous, genealogical writing should be sustainable as a record of inheritance intact. If you look at the current period, documenting the genealogy is not a culture that is a live and practiced by the entire community. This is a problem not only in the Balinese society, but Indonesia in general. Given the documentation activity is closely associated with genealogical search in the future.

So needed today is held revitalization movement, by reviving the traditions ever existed, including a tradition of writing down the family tree. Especially with the advancement of information technology, will make documentation and information retrieval activities will become easier and more sophisticated. After that will come a proposition, if tradition and technology synergies, it will create a culture that is more sophisticated and informative, penetrate local, national up to global levels. Although currently writing genealogy tends to be written on paper, while on lontar is increasingly rare, except by groups who pursue nyastra. As long as it is essentially the same, namely efforts to revive the tradition of documenting the genealogy, do it in any way is a good thing. What matters is, firstly, how the idea of writing the genealogy became popular in the community, then after that discussed the more advanced idea. That nyaurat tradition or write text on lontar has also not to be abandoned, for various reasons, one of them because it is a local wisdom (tradition) that should be preserved.

Conclusion

The documenting tradition of genealogical information by the Balinese people are still very weak, so it is necessary to be held revitalization movement. Given the problems of the difficulty of Kawitan searching is closely associated with the genealogical documentation process. A state of weak documentation, make many people who are confused or having trouble finding their family origins. Genealogical writing has not become a common discourse, as well as awareness of the things that are more rooted in Kawitan traditions. Not only the people, even in the government situation. There are institutions engaged in the documentation, but it is very 'dry', there is no meaningful work they have done. What needs to be done now is to build public awareness as well as governments through revitalization movement, how to improve the public's understanding of Kawitan more comprehensively. The problems and conflicts that occur because an understanding of Kawitan are not yet entrenched. Kawitan not just about genetic inheritance or kinship, but also about identity, social-religious life, even political position and title. Kawitan not limited to genealogical searching process, but also there is the process of genealogical writing, all of which should be part of a whole process in Kawitan tradition. With traditional knowledge and the development of the modern world (in construction, description, functional and structural), human can humanize and civilize human, so human is able to find his true identity as a human being. Similarly, the developments in technology that create a discovery program more inclusive and synergistic, with good integration between traditional ways with modern technology. Thus the tradition will be able to embrace modernity and vice versa modernity can collaborate with tradition, which raises their sustainability.
